

Lisa Wickenheiser holds degrees from Shippensburg University in Elementary and Special Education. She has taught in private settings, public schools and has homeschooled for more than two decades. Her present role in the homeschool community is that of supervisor and evaluator. Additionally, Lisa teaches ESL online to young students living in China.

Lisa's love and devotion to the Lord, coupled with her understanding, sensitivity and God-given vision for the disAbility community, have come together as she works with local churches; encouraging them and giving them the tools necessary for becoming more fully engaged in ministry with families affected by disAbility. She has led ministry efforts resulting in the establishment and growth of outreach to those living with disAbility. She has also been a presenter on the topic at area churches as well as Messiah College. As founder of Full House Ministry, she works to build awareness, provide education, offer consultation, and lend support to individuals and churches desiring to live into the Luke 14 Mandate. "Go out to the roads and country lanes and compel them to come in, so that my house will be full." (Luke 14:23)

Lisa resides in Camp Hill, Pennsylvania with her husband, Brian. They have been incredibly blessed with 2 daughters and 3 sons. Together, they are a family living with disAbility and discovering beauty and joy within God's plan for disAbility and suffering. They endeavor to help others to discover it too!
